DETAILED ACTION

1. This action is in response to applicant's communication filed on 06/11/2004, wherein claims 1-6 are currently pending.

Information Disclosure Statement

2. The information disclosure statement (IDS) submitted on 02/06/2004 is being considered by the examiner.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 101

3. 35 U.S.C. 101 reads as follows:

Whoever invents or discovers any new and useful process, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement thereof, may obtain a patent therefor, subject to the conditions and requirements of this title.

4. Claims 1-6 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. §101 because the claims are considered hybrid claims ("system and method"). See MPEP §2173.05(p) II.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

5. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(a) the invention was known or used by others in this country, or patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country, before the invention thereof by the applicant for a patent.

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

(e) the invention was described in:

(1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or

(2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

6. Claims 1-6 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Wake (US 4,796,201).

7. Regarding Claim 1:

Wake discloses a method of managing the development of a packaging prototype ([Abstract], "Stored program controlled data processing apparatus operates in concert with display and printing equipment to create, modify and print graphics for consumer goods or other packaging applications") and ([Col. 1, lines 5-10], "packaging designs and, more specifically, to a stored program controlled system for creating, viewing, modifying and printing graphics-bearing packaging materials"), comprising:

providing a packaging prototype system whereby said system dictates how the packaging for a product will be produced based on a production process between a design manager and suppliers ([Col. 2, lines 26-31], "as a first matter, the processing of the instant invention permits a designer to originate and modify graphics until satisfied with the esthetics and accuracy of the composite graphics presentation which will ultimately be printed on the packaging"), whereby a communications platform is established between the design manager and the suppliers (see Abstract lines 18-21).

8. Regarding Claims 2-3:

Wake discloses a method of managing the development of a packaging prototype wherein the communications platform being established between the design manager ([Col. 2, lines 26-31], "as a first matter, the processing of the instant invention permits a designer to originate and modify graphics until satisfied with the esthetics and accuracy of the composite graphics presentation which will ultimately be printed on the packaging"); and said suppliers, the suppliers consisting of a separator ([Col. 2, lines 34-36], "In the initial formation of an image, the operator/graphics creator enters each constituent ("element") of the ultimate image and defines its parameters");

a designer ([Col. 2, lines 46-49], "As additions, modifications or deletions are being made to one or more image elements, the effect is presented to the designer on the face of the display"); and a printer ([Col. 3, lines 7-10], "Once the packaging design is in final form, it is communicated from memory to any per se well known printing device for reproduction as desired to satisfy the packaging requirement"); and wherein providing the packaging prototype system, said communications platform comprises a protocol, a production planned prototype ([Col. 3, lines 7-10],

"once the packaging design is in final form, it is communicated from memory to any per se well known printing device for reproduction as desired"; and a plan ([Col. 1, lines 25-28], "packaging development apparatus which assigns priorities to packaging design elements").

9. Regarding Claim 4:

Wake discloses a method of managing the development of a packaging prototype wherein providing the packaging prototype system protocol involves understanding objectives, providing a baseline expertise, exploring production opportunities and identifying obstacles in the production process (Col. 1, lines 17-29).

10. Regarding Claim 5:

Wake discloses a method of managing the development of a packaging prototype wherein providing the packaging prototype system and the production planned prototype involves emulating a specific print process chosen for final production whereby the final production print process is replicable ([Col. 3, lines 7-10], "Once the packaging design is in final form, it is communicated from memory to any per se well known printing device for reproduction as desired to satisfy the packaging requirement.")

11. Regarding Claim 6:

Wake discloses a method of managing the development of a packaging prototype wherein providing the packaging prototype system plan contains a print sample, black and white progressives, production specifications, product package in final print form (Col. 3, lines 7-10);

key information learned during the creation of the prototype ([Col. 6, lines 66-67], "store the changed information");

color swatches and digital support files whereby the plan provides documentation to replicate the packaging prototype and said package in final print form ([Col. 3, lines 7-10], "Once the packaging design is in final form, it is communicated from memory to any per se well known printing device for reproduction as desired to satisfy the packaging requirement").
